MONTENEGRO

Formally Serbia and Montenegro, a remnant of what was formally Yugoslavia, Montenegro finds itself nestled on the Adriatic coast bordered by Bosnia, Serbia and Croatia. 'Black Mountain' as it translates, Montenegro is home to large swathes of thick forest and mountainous areas making it a popular destination to explore the arresting natural beauty of the country. The somewhat unlikely playground for the international rich and famous, in recent years this Balkan state has become a hub for superyachts which flock to the coastline to enjoy the luxury facilities of the country's largest marina; Porto Montenegro, located in the UNESCO protected Bay of Kotor. Originally built as an Austro-Hungarian naval base which was decommissioned following the end of the Cold War, in addition to 228 residences, restaurants, bars, shops, a yacht club, a five-star Regent hotel, and a Naval Heritage museum, the marina boasts a swath of 450 berths for yachts and superyachts alike, not to mention an international education option by way of Knightsbridge School which offers the International Baccalaureate for children aged 3-19. Popular amongst foreign investors this once quiet fishermen's haven and politically troubled nation is widely tipped to become one of Europe's most exciting locations. Montenegro's style is hard to beat. Mesmerised by the blend of elegance and grandeur, Total Management Travel tips the country's most desirable hotels.

REGENT HOTEL PORTO MONTENEGRO

Hotel Regent Porto Montenegro, designed in Italian palazzo-style by architects ReardonSmith in the town of Tivat located on the shore of the Bay of Kotor, is the hub of luxury in the country's most coveted marina. Looking over the palm tree lined marina and out across the bay, towards a mountainous horizon, this exceptional location makes the Regent Porto Montenegro the perfect place from which to explore the Bay of Kotor, Tivat and the rest of Montenegro. Divided across 57 rooms which comprise suites, penthouses and residences, the property also has its own spa, including five treatment rooms, an outdoor pool with bay views, a gym, Hammam, sauna and more where guests can unwind, relax and experience holistic wellbeing.

Rooms from €175 including upgrade at time of arrival, buffet breakfast for two daily for duration of the stay, complimentary lunch for two in the Dining Room Restaurant and and early check-in/late check-out
